

Editorial Intern

Summer 2017

Location: New York, New York

GreenGale Publishing (formerly Niche Media) is looking for an Editorial Intern to join our high-performing team for the summer to work primarily on our Hamptons title. The internship is a great way to experience all aspects of magazine publishing, including researching story ideas, fact-checking, and working with PR. There are also writing opportunities (including the potential for bylined pieces) that will give the interns the chance to receive feedback and guidance from our editors.

While primarily acting as support staff for the editors, the intern will have other duties, including:

- Compiling research for all categories: Dining, Arts and Culture, Fashion, Design, Health, Fitness, and Real Estate.
- Transcribing interviews and fact-checking Invited pages.
- Writing and updating Source listings with the potential to write 200-word profile pieces.

Applicants should be available to start early May and work a minimum of three to four days per week. Candidates must show a knowledge of and passion for the luxury lifestyle category. A deep understanding of social media is a plus. This is an unpaid position. Interns must receive school credit.